Dear [redacted]

STAT

Many thanks for your complimentary note of 4 April and the copy of the preliminary proposal regarding use of aerial photography to inventory fallout deposits. I am interested in this line of endeavor and have supported ACDA with data and full time loan of some of our technicians for the past 16 months. I'll let you know what their interests might be in this and further, if there is a tangent we could take without their immediate interest or support.

Our work rolls along at the usual rapid clip. We are now in our new plant with good space, equipment and a few creature comforts but none of these seem to flatten the continuously rising overtime work record curve. When you are in D.C. drop by and see for yourself.

A bundle of honors has been dropped on me and the letters and wires have come in from all over the world. Navy fellows who worked with us during the War seem to have caught the message and many unseen for years have come back into the communication pattern. A sample or two of the news release items might be of interest to you in explaining this reaction. In fact, out at Langley they have a glass case full of Crisis Calendars, Medals, Awards, clippings and other personal data surrounding the central announcement of the National Civil Service League Award. You could get really carried away by this stuff if you had time to wallow in it, but we are too busy to count up the score while the game goes on.

I hope this finds you, [redacted] and the family in good health and that life will continue to bring well being, happiness and success to your door.
